

Environmental Law Excellence and Access Program (ELEAP)

Scholarship Application

The Environmental Law Excellence and Access Program (ELEAP) was created to provide support for students enrolled at the University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law who have demonstrated commitment to working in and providing diverse viewpoints, perspectives, and experiences to the field of environmental law. ELEAP is designed to encourage environmental law practice and nurture and develop talent in the environmental law field. The University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law is committed to broadening access to careers in environmental law and seeks applicants that will be able to make unique contributions to the character of the Law School's educational experience and ultimately to the legal field after graduation. Applicants will be assessed as to their unique background, contributions and viewpoints they bring to the environmental law field, demonstrated interest in pursuing environmental law after graduation, and their qualifications as law students and professionals. Scholarships are funded through the generous support from the Environmental Integrity Project (EIP).
